TNF, wherein said naturally occurring TBP-II protein is the same as that protein having the ability to inhibit the cytotoxic effect of TNF which, after being purified by subjecting a crude protein recovered from a dialyzed concentrate of human urine to affinity chromatography on a column of immobilized [with] TNF[- α], elutes from a reversed-phase high pressure liquid chromatography column and as a single peak in a fraction corresponding to about 31% acetonitrile and shows [an apparent] a molecular weight of about 30 kDa when measured by [reducing] SDS-PAGE under reducing conditions.

Rewrite claim 46 in amended form as follows:

46 (Amended). An isolated DNA molecule comprising (1) a contiguous [the] nucleotide sequence coding for a protein consisting of naturally occurring human Tumor Necrosis Factor (TNF) Binding Protein II, herein designated TBP-II, said TBP-II including, at the N-terminal region thereof, the amino acid sequence: Thr-Pro-Tyr-Ala-Pro-Glu-Pro-Gly-Ser-Thr, said protein having the ability to inhibit the cytotoxic effect of TNF, wherein said naturally occurring TBP-II protein is the same as that protein having the ability to inhibit the cytotoxic effect
